How to Preserve Women.

(From the Springfield, (Mass.) Republican.)

There is nothing in this world that we think so much of as we do of women. Our mother is a woman,—wife, sisters, pretty cousins, all are women, and the daughters will be, if (Heaven spare them!) they live long enough. And then there is a love of women in general, which we do not deny. A fine, magnificent specimen of the sex, full of life and health—a ripe red cheek and lip, and flashing eye—is something that does one good to look at, as she illuminates the hum-drum side walks of every day streets. A North river steamboat, under full headway, with colors flying, is rather a pretty sight; rather stirring and inspiring; and we pull up our tired nag, on the shore, to see her pass, and admire the swell she cuts. Comparatively, however, the steamer sinks into insignificence, or some other very, very deep water by the side of a well kept, well dressed woman. There is no rubbing it out; women are the ornament, charm, blessing, beauty and bliss of life, (man's life we mean, of course,) and any means that can be devised for preserving them should be publicly known. They are different from any other kind of fruit. You cannot pickle them; vinegar absolutely spoils them. You cannot do them up in sugar, and set them in a cold room, with a paper soaked in brandy over their mouths. You cannot put them into cans, and seal them them up, air-tight, without injuring their form and flavor. Now as men are so dependent upon woman for life's choicest blessings, a proper mode of preserving them becomes a matter of great moment, and we are sure that the public will thank us for an unfailing receipt. Here they have it.

Wash clean, with cool water, as often as three times a week in cold weather, and every day in warm weather, and then rub dry, with a coarse towel. If the skin takes on a blush, under the friction of the towel, so much the better. It betrays inherent vitality, and a happy re-action.—After the glow is well established, dress in winter with thick flannel—flannel jacket next the skin, and a pair of flannel drawers, which, like the jacket, were better knit, and fitted closely. Over the terminations of these, heavy woolen or worsted hose should be drawn. If this preliminary process is perfected, a very important step has been gained towards the general result. Women are spoiled nearly as much from unprotected limbs as from unprotected feet. Skirts are but an indifferent protection. A man would absolutely freeze with them. Well, then; after the jacket and drawers are on, and the woolen hose, there is nothing to hinder the perfection of the dress after the usual mode. The woman is on the direct road to preservation, and no damage done to her looks.

Expose to the air daily. As a preparation for this, put the feet, already inclosed in a woolen hose, (premising still that the season is winter,) in thick soled shoes or in regular Wellington boots. The thin slippers, and the thin cold rubbers beneath are not enough. A better conductor of calorie could hardly be found than they combine to produce. Besides, the rubber confines the moisture of the foot, and every moment it is worn the worse it becomes, until the connection of the foot with the ice beneath it is almost as direct as if no medium interposed. We would not discourage rubbers over thick shoes, to be worn during brief passages. They are very useful and convenient, but they should never be relied upon as the main protection of the feet. Having the feet well protected, pay the next attention to the chest. The chest is the repository of the vital organs. There abide the heart and lungs. It is from the impression made upon these organs, through the skin that the shiver comes. It is nature's quake—its alarm bell—at the onset of danger. A woman never shivers from the effect of cold upon her limbs, or hands, or head; but let the cold strike through her clothing upon her chest, and off goes her teeth into a chatter, and the whole organism is in commotion. One sudden and severe impression of the cold upon the chest has slain its tens of thousands. Therefore, while the feet are well looked after, never forget the chest. These points attended to, the natural connections of dress will supply the rest, and the woman is ready for the air. Now let her circulate—visit her neighbors, go shopping, call upon the poor, and walk for the good of it and the fun of it.

Keep away from the stove and the register. Air that is dry and burnt, and more or less charged with the gases evolved by the consumption of fuel, is poison. Go up stairs and make beds with mittens on. Fly around the house like mad and ventilate the rooms. Don't sit pent up in a single room, with double windows. Fruit will not retain its full form and flavor in air-tight cans; neither will women. They need air. If the shiver comes on, in these operations, go directly and put something more about the chest.

Thus much for winter treatment. Circulate [illegible] for the other seasons of the year, adapt the clothing to every change of the temperature. This may require a modification of the dress four or five times in a day, and it pays. Ours is a variable climate, and if we see fit to live in [illegible] ry as air, and a brown tan is far preferable, as a matter of beauty, to a sickly paleness of complexion.

Thus much in the way of physical means for preservation. There are moral means, hardly less important. Every woman should be married to an excellent man. Marriage brings care and wear, but it is the ring which is worn that keeps bright, and the watch which lies still and unwound that gets out of order. The sweet sympathies evolved in the relations of the family, the new energies developed by new responsibilities, the new compensations secured for all outlays of strength, bring about a delightful play of all the faculties of the heart and intellect; which, in their reaction upon the body, produce an effect that, in the end, is nothing less than preservative. Then there is a higher moral power than this,—one which we speak of soberly, honestly. No woman is completely armed against the encroaching ills of life who has in her heart no place for religion. The calmness, the patience, the joy and the hope that are the possession of a woman whose heart is right in its highest relations can never fail to heighten and preserve every personal power and charm which she possesses.

There you have the recipe. Some of it is in sportive form, but it is none the less sober truth for that. It has within it the cure for many a disease—the preventive of many more. It might be made longer, but when we see its prescriptions universally adopted, it will be time to bring forward the remainder.

Facts for Congressmen and their Constituents.

If Mr. Banks is to be sacrificed—and that, too, on the demand of the Slaveholders—for the heresy of "entertaining the physiological opinion that the stronger race will absorb the weaker," it may be well for the public to be reminded upon what authority Northern citizens have been led to imbibe that theory.

The late Henry Clay, in his celebrated speech in the Senate of the United States, on "Petitions for the Abolition of Slavery," Feb. 7, 1839, says:

"Although in particular districts the black population is gaining upon the whites, it only constitutes one-fifth of the whole population of the United States. And, taking the aggregate of the two races, the European is constantly, though slowly, gaining on the African portion. This fact is demonstrated by the periodical returns of our population. Let us cease, then, to indulge in gloomy forebodings about the impenetrable future. But if we may attempt to lift the veil and contemplate what lies beyond it, I, too, have ventured upon a speculative theory, with which I will not now trouble you, but which has been published to the world. According to that, in the process of time, some one hundred and fifty or two hundred years hence, but few vestiges of the black race will remain among our posterity."—Life and Speeches of Henry Clay, vol. II., pp. 372–3.

No one who reads Southern papers and notices the frequent mention in advertisements and otherwise of white slaves, can be at any loss for the facts that underlie this "speculative theory." It has long since passed into a proverb and on high Virginia authority—the late John Randolph of Roanoke—that "the noblest blood of Virginia runs in the veins of slaves." A sister of the late James Madison remarked to the late Rev. George Bourne, (who published the statement long since,) we Southern ladies are dignified with the title of wives; we are only mistresses of seraglios." One reputed daughter of Thomas Jefferson was sold at auction in New Orleans for $1,000; another of them was found among the emigrants to Liberia. We Northerners get sight of white fugitives often enough to understand whence "physiological opinions" have their data. The cry of "amalgamation" was potent 20 years ago. The people understand it now.

☞ That was a good sentiment given by George W. Bentley at the editors' and printers' supper, in Worcester, last 17th of January: "Franklin:—To-day making lights for Boston's lampless lanterns—to-morrow enlightening the world; one day stirring the cauldron of the tallow chandler, and the next rocking the iron cradle of the mightiest democracy on the globe; the apprentice boy to-day, the revered of kings to-morrow; the "poor Ben" of his mother to-day, the immortal Franklin forever!"

☞ There are in Maryland 20,816 adult whites unable to read or write, and there are but 14 public schools with 476 scholars, for its whole white population of 80,000. More than 10,000 of the voters of Maryland cannot read the names of the candidates they vote for—so is America governed by Americans.

STRAINING AT A GNAT.—A private letter written by a Western gentleman who is at Washington on business, speaks with some severity of Mr. Thorington's ill-advised motion to make Mr. Lewis D. Campbell Speaker by resolution, more especially as Mr. Thorington's favorite candidate thus far had been Nathaniel P. Banks. He says:

"The North will one day call these men to a stern account, who, like the Scribes and the Pharisees, strain at a Gnat and swallow a Campbell."

The City of Rock Island—Its Situation and Prospects.

We have been kindly furnished with the following sketch of our city from the pen of a Traveler who will be recognized as an accurate observer.

The City of Rock Island was first laid out as a town in 1835. Scarcely any spot could have been selected that presents so admirable a site for a city, for in almost every direction the land lies exactly right for building purposes, requiring no excavation, and with a sufficient slope for all necessary drainage. Rock River enters the Mississippi about three miles west of it, and between these spreads a beautiful plain for the expansion of the city in that direction. The steamboat landing is only some four feet above high water mark, thus affording the greatest facilities for the shipments and delivery of freights. In addition to these great natural advantages, the city stands in the direct line of Railroad communications with the Atlantic at the only spot where it is practicable to bridge the Mississippi and thus keep an uninterrupted connection with the extreme western limits of the country, through one of the richest agricultural tracts in the world. The growth of population in the last two or three years show that these advantages are well known and appreciated. For while on the 22d Feb., 1854, at the opening of the Rock Island and Chicago Railroad the population was less than 2,000—it may safely be estimated in 1856 at 8,000.

The City Directory for 1855 shows 434 distinct business houses all engaged in profitable employment with a business that increases in a faster ratio than the facilities for transacting it.

A brief allusion to one or two important facts will show that the enterprise of the town has a substantial basis—that the manufacturing interests of the place must expand with the rapid settlement of the North and West, since nature has been most bountiful in an abundant supply of coal in its immediate neighborhood.

The Rock Island and Chicago Railroad runs through a coal region from the Mississippi to its termination east—of 100 miles, and about 1,000 acres of land are found within an average of six miles. Several of the banks being connected with the railroad by turn-outs and switches.

The Rock Island and Peoria Railroad is under contract and will be in operation the 1st Sept., 1856, for 12 miles; bringing another 1,000 acres of coal into hourly communication with the city, and which, when finished, will extend through a coal region of 92 miles.

The Warsaw and Rockford Railroad is graded to the head of the Upper Rapids, a distance of 20 miles from the city. The direction of all these railroads, centering in Rock Island, is from the north-east and south-east.

The bridge across the Mississippi, (to be finished in March, 1856,) connecting the Great Trunk Line from New York with the road from Davenport on the Iowa side to Council Bluffs, is one of the great enterprises of the day. Its importance, not only to these twin cities, but to the whole country, cannot be over estimated. It makes them the central point on the Mississippi for all divergent railroad lines on both shores from that centre, while it unites in an indissoluble bond of the strongest mutual interests the most widely separated portions of our common country.

The natural result of all these eminent advantages is seen in the rapid growth of the manufacturing interests of Rock Island—for already there are ten steam engines employed in that city for manufacturing purposes alone. The suburbs of the city, Moline and Camden, are very flourishing places, each having the most valuable water power in the State, and keeping pace with the city in population, with which at no distant day they must be united under one government.

The great development of its natural resources, accompanied by a rapidly accumulating wealth, is marked in Rock Island by a commensurate advancement in the refinement and cultivation of its people. The city is adorned with many very tasteful and costly private residences, with superior Church Edifices, and Public Schools for both sexes. The Chi-pi-an-nock Cemetery, recently laid out, is one of the beautiful features of the place, and is perhaps the most tastefully arranged of any in the State. The following list of some of the larger manufacturing establishments will show what immense progress has been made by the city in the short period of its existence. It will challenge a comparison with the statistics of any city of the Union at the same age—and shows what may be expected in the course of another ten years, when Iowa and Minnesota, to the North and West of it, have been filled up with a population, whose wants can be best and most economically supplied from this point.

There are:

Two Iron Foundries with a capital of	$100,000
One Ship Yard, with a capital of	20,000
Two Saw Mills, with a capital of	50,000
Two Steam Flouring Mills, with a capital of	50,000
Two Pork Packing Establishments.
Three Banking Houses.

The city has three daily newspapers, a signal proof of its prosperity. It is lighted with gas, and has two public markets.

The number of steamboat arrivals in 1855 was 2,120.

If then, we consider the double advantages it [illegible] tion to that great country similar to that held by Cincinnati. But not only does it offer great advantages for the prosecution of business, but presents on all its surroundings some of the most beautiful and attractive scenery in the west.—Nature has lavished her beauties upon the country with an unsparing hand, and seems to invite the taste and skill of man to adorn it with the triumphs of his art. Nature, too, has bestowed upon it a genial climate and protected it from the maladies incident to all new countries. The prevailing winds Summer carry away from the Illinois shore whatever malaria may have been generated in the southern prairies, and temper the Summer heats with their sweet and cooling breath. For garden spots, there can not be a better country, every year showing a constant improvement in the cultivation of the adjacent land. Offering, as thus it does, such attractions to all classes of people, does it seem extravagant in us to anticipate for the future of Rock Island an uninterrupted growth. If in two or three years it has advanced from 2,000 to 8,000 of population, what may be expected for it, when the different railroads now in progress are completed and the connections by the Railroad bridge is established with Iowa.

Well may all Rock Islanders then in view of such considerations as these—"thank God and take courage."

Lord John Russell's Letter.

The following is the text of the letter from Lord John Russell to Mr. Crampton in 1853, which is supposed so materially to affect the pending controversy between the English and American governments about Central America:

LORD JOHN RUSSELL TO MR. CRAMPTON.

LONDON, January 19, 1853.

Sir—In treating of the affairs of Mosquito, I must in the first place refer you to the dispatch of Lord Malmesbury of the 6th of July, 1852, upon this subject. It is evident that since Great Britain first assumed the protection and defence of the Mosquito Indians, the position of all parties has changed.

First—Spain, instead of exercising absolute sovereignty over Central America, and prohibiting all commerce on the coasts under her sway, has entirely lost her dominion over the continent from Cape Horn to Florida.

Second—The Mosquito Indians, instead of governing their own tribe according to their own customs, furnish a name and title to Europeans and Americans who carry on trade at Greytown and along the coast of Mosquito, according to the usages of civilized nations.

Third—Great Britain, instead of having an interest in the defence of the Mosquito Indians, for the sake of rescuing part of the territory of Central America from Spanish control, and obtaining an authority for her commerce, has no other interest in Mosquito than that which is derived from an honorable regard for her old connection with the Indian nation of Mosquito.

Her Majesty's government has for several years endeavored to suit her engagements to the altered circumstances of the case: but every proposal that has been made with this view has encountered some insuperable obstacle. The contentions in Central America between Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Honduras—the absence of any authority with which any permanent agreement could be made—unbounded jealousies of Great Britain, and various other circumstances, have prevented the settlement of this vexatious question.

In conformity with the opinions stated in Lord Malmesbury's dispatch of July 16, to which I have already referred, I have to state that the committee of government of Greytown are, in fact, the real power that exercises authority in that part of Central America. To Her Majesty's government it would be a matter of indifference, whether that authority was exercised in the name of the King of Mosquito or in the name of Greytown itself. But it is desirable that what is apparent should be made to conform as far as possible with what is real. What is apparent is, that the King of Mosquito exercises sovereignty over Greytown. What is real, is, that he had no authority there whatever, but that the committee of Europeans and Americans carry on the government of that port.

What her Majesty's government, therefore, should consider a good and final arrangement would be—First, that Greytown should be a free and independent port, connected with Mosquito by such relations of friendship and alliance as may be agreed upon. Second, that indemnification, or advantages equivalent to those laid down in the project of convention of the 13th of April, 1852, shall be assured to Mosquito in return for its withdrawal from its present position with regard to Greytown. Third, that Great Britain and the United States, without guaranteeing Greytown, should be ready to act in concert to defend the independence of the free city or port of Greytown, from whatever quarter it might be attacked.

What is essential and of immediate importance, is, that the authorities of Greytown should be ready to assume either unqualified independence, with an engagement to defend Mosquito, or qualified independence, owing allegiance and support to Mosquito. For this purpose, some person qualified to treat should proceed at once to Greytown. Whether a naval officer of her Majesty's service or a civil one would be a fitter person to be entrusted with this mission, I must leave you to decide. It would be desirable, if the government of the United States should concur in these views, that a new convention, in place of the unaccepted project of agreement of April, 1852, should be proposed and concluded, and that a person similarly qualified should be sent by this government at the same time and for the same object.

I have only further to say that indemnity to Mosquito might possibly be not made in money, but in greater security, for certain fixed territory within which the free-port of Greytown, assisted by her Majesty's ships of war, might manage to defend the Mosquito nation. The Governor General of Canada and authorities in other of her Majesty's North American possessions, have made from time to time agreements somewhat similar. The President of the United States has frequently made conventions with the Indians to the like effect.

The peculiarity of this case is, that certain neighboring states deny altogether the independence of Mosquito, and the Mosquito nation are liable every day to new incursions upon their territory. We can make no complete provision against this danger. Our policy is to do all that honor and humanity require in behalf of the Mosquito nation. But we intend to adhere strictly to the treaty of Washington, of the 19 April, 1850, and not to assume any sovereignty, either direct or indirect in Central America. J. RUSSELL.

MEMORANDUM IN MR. EVERETT'S HANDWRITING.

Mr. Crampton authorized me to communicate this to Congress in any way I thought proper.

Letter from Jesse O. Norton.

Mr. Norton has written a letter in reply to the charges made by the Joliet Signal, that he had voted at different times for Pennington and Fuller, "both of whom stand pledged to vote for the admission of Kansas as a slave State." He says:

"These statements are false in every particular. I have never voted for Mr. Fuller for Speaker, and while he maintains his present opinions on the subject of slavery, I never can, and no earthly power can induce me to do so.

Of Mr. Pennington for whom I voted several times, before our friends united upon Mr. Banks, I have to say, that he is not pledged to the "admission of Kansas as a slave State," and he has this moment authorized me to say, that the statement is a gross falsehood, doing injustice both to him and myself.

He opposed the Kansas Nebraska Bill in the last Congress, in every stage of its progress.—We have in our anti-Nebraska ranks, in this House, no man more opposed to the extension of slavery in our new territories than this noble son of New Jersey. For nearly a hundred ballots he has, like myself and others, been giving his vote steadily for Mr. Banks.

When the time comes that I shall basely surrender the fair territories of Kansas and Nebraska to the dominion of Slavery, either by voice or vote, by word or deed, "let my right hand forget her cunning, and let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth."

Very truly yours,

JESSE O. NORTON.

PERSONAL.—Gov. Bashford arrived from Madison last evening, and leaves this morning for Oshkosh. He expresses himself entirely satisfied with the aspect of the suit in the Supreme Court, and entertains no doubt of a favorable issue.—Milwaukee Sentinel, Saturday.

Small Bank Notes.

The Springfield Daily Republican says that a strong effort is to be made with the present Massachusetts Legislature, to forbid by law the circulation of all bank notes of a less denomination than five dollars. The movement originates in Boston, and is "powerfully backed up there by the banks and business men. Thus among the signers of the petitions for the suppression are these well known houses: A. & A. Lawrence & Co., J. W. Paige & Co., Charles H. Mills & Co., Mason & Lawrence, J. M. Beebe, Richardson & Co., F. Skinner & Co., Upham, Tucker & Co., Converse, Harding & Co., Gardner, Brewer & Co., Waterston, Dean & Co., Tucker, Newton & Mills, Parker, Wilder & Co., and J. A. Lowell. The argument for the change proposed is, that it will bring into and keep in circulation a large amount of gold and silver, and so far give more character and stability to the currency."

The singularity in the movement is not the reason assigned for it, (that is satisfactory and conclusive,) but the place of its origination. Any approach to or squinting to a metallic currency by Boston banks and merchants, is one of the marvels of the day. For the interests of the West, let us hope that the measure will succeed.

Pierce, the Candidate of the South.

When General Pierce offered the South a bid for the Presidency in his Message, he knew the men to whom the bid was made, and did not miscalculate its effect. The South responds; and this day Pierce stock is at par in Southern political markets. In the Democratic State Convention of Georgia, it was resolved "That the State of Georgia would hail with unbounded satisfaction and entire confidence the renomination of Franklin Pierce to the office of President of the United States; Provided, He shall stand pledged to carry out the principles of our Platform in his Administration, and in his appointments to office."

The Georgia Legislature cordially and heartily endorses this action. In North Carolina the Democratic State Committee sing praise to him and his policy. The Charleston Mercury says that Alabama is like Georgia, and that four-fifths of South Carolina would accept his nomination as the best and most judicious that could be made. "The people took to him," continues the Mercury, "as their natural leader—one who is clear and indisputable, who is beyond suspicion—one who has been tried and approved."

When it is remembered that the Georgia Platform is more inimical to Freedom than that of any other Southern State—that South Carolina claims the right and avows her intention to go into nullification—that Alabama in an humble way is the imitator of the two, and that all three support their tool in his efforts for re-election,—the North will see what manner of man this Mr. Pierce is. Douglas is outbidden, and Pierce is the leader of the Sectional Pro-Slavery Party. We wish his Free Soil supporters in this city, much joy in their bed-fellows.

Politics in City Affairs.

For the first time in several years, we see the train bands of a political party organizing and drilling preparatory to our Municipal Election, which they intend to contest and carry, if they can, upon political grounds. It has been conceded, heretofore, that the local interests of Chicago, the improvement of our streets and wharves, the establishment of a system of sewerage, the reduction of taxes, the management of the schools, the care of the police, and the protection of property were of greater immediate importance than the triumph of this party, or that; of this clique of aspirants, or that knot of office seekers. Under the rule that has been agreed to by all parties, Chicago has done better by far than any other city of similar importance and size, in which the city affairs, and the handling of the city funds were made the rewards of partizan service, and not public evidences of trustworthiness and esteem. We regret now to see a disposition, anywhere evinced, to change the order of things, and to put the questions upon which so much of Chicago's prosperity depends, prominently into the political field, where they will become matters of contention, [illegible] the interest in their proper adjustment, that they have in pushing themselves into place. We regret to see the Public Schools, now doing a beneficent and much needed work, brought down to the level of hot-house politicians, and made a foot-ball for them to kick. But the Nebraska party has taken the initiative and means to execute its purposes, no matter what evils may follow.

We are mistaken in the temper of the property-holders and tax-payers of Chicago, and we are mistaken in the intentions of those who are honestly laboring to become such, if this thing is submitted to without remonstrance. We do not know what course they will adopt toward off the blow that is aimed at them, but we do know that whatever defence they may make, whatever right thing they may do to keep the affairs of the city above and out of the reach of the hungry partizans who are looking for honors and emoluments that they can attain in no other way than by the potency of party drill, the Tribune will aid in such way as it can. The time for action is short. What shall be done?

The Assault on Greeley.

The telegraph has informed our readers that Rust, M. C. of Arkansas, assaulted and beat Horace Greeley on Tuesday, in Washington. There can be but one sentiment as regards this act, that of condemnation. He who would strike him would strike a woman, and none but a cowardly wretch would do either. Greeley has always been known as a non-resistant. He was never known to strike a human being, in anger, in his life; never known to resent a blow by a blow since he had a being, or to use physical force to defend himself from assault.

All public men know these inbred traits of Mr. Greeley's character; Rust knew them; he knew he was in no danger of being shot, stabbed or knocked down if he beat Greeley. He knew furthermore, that the object of his resentment was a feeble man, physically incapable of self-defence, however willing; that he never carried deadly weapons to resist assaults on his person or attempts on his life; Rust knew perfectly well all these things. But that knowledge only served to embolden the purpose of the base miscreant. He had been accustomed to lashing male, and knocking down female slaves, in the State from whence he came. Had the low-born villain dreamed that Mr. Greeley was prepared with weapons to punish such an outrage, he would be the last thing in the semblance of a man to have dared to make it.

Fresh from women-whipping, those cotton lordlings import their plantation airs and manners to the federal city, there to bully frail men, and beat non-resistants. Mr. Greeley's offense, was the constitutional exercise of the Freedom of the Press. He spoke plainly and truly of the doings of Congress. He informed a million of American voters, through the medium of his Tribune, of the conduct of the Arkansas Congressional loafer, in language fitting for the occasion. But this was more than the swaggering ruffian was accustomed to hear from the lips of trembling slaves. In the State he represents, free speech and a Free Press are unknown. The tyrant "master," lords it over the "poor white trash" and scourged bond-men, alike. At Washington he will brook no greater restraint; and northern doughfaces, loathsome, treacherous and base, cringe before him, and yield obedience to his mandates, for the sake, as they declare, of preserving the Union!

"We counsel not blood, nor aggression, but until Northern men, at Washington, return an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, they may set it down as a settled fact, that the plantation lords will crack their whips over their heads, spit in their faces, and knock them down at pleasure, all to "preserve the Union," and Northern flunkies will always be found in abundance to applaud the insulter and hiss the insulted. But if we mistake not the signs of the times, a new leaf, ere many winters, will be turned over, when Freemen will teach these swaggering ruffians a different lesson.

RAILROAD AGENCY AT BUFFALO.—The great increase of the business of the Illinois Central Railroad, has compelled the Company to establish an agency at Buffalo for the accommodation of the trade and travel from that quarter. The agency is under the control and direction of Mr. John Comstock, formerly of the Great Western Road, and the right hand man of Mr. Morris, whose efficiency is so well known among railroad men. Mr. Comstock possesses all the requisites to make a popular and efficient officer, and he will belie his antecedents if he does not give general satisfaction to the business public.

The Pacific Railroad.

It may be that, at some future day, a Railroad to the Pacific will be necessary as a branch of the military defences of the country, for the protection of our western coast. That such a road will be undertaken and completed by individual enterprise as a means of profit, or that it will be carried forward by Government without a necessity greater than is now apparent, is an event that the people ought not to look for—an event, the expectation of which should not be suffered to linger in the public mind. If, while the country West of the Missouri, Iowa, and Arkansas frontier was but imperfectly known, doubts of the practicability of the enterprise were very generally entertained, though not often expressed, it is now certain that these doubts, since the result of the late official surveys, will assume the shape of convictions that no rhetoric in newspapers or eloquence in speeches can overthrow. The results of these surveys as embodied in the Report of the Secretary of War, are before us; and to our minds they furnish convincing facts, warranting the conclusions to which we have arrived. It is a matter of regret that the statement is necessarily so sweeping and general; for we in common with, we may say, all the editorial fraternity of the country have had our imaginations warmed and our patriotism excited with the prospect, though distant, of the union of the two oceans—by the promise of a new bond by which the Union would be more firmly clamped, and by the completion of an enterprise that, for usefulness and grandeur would overshadow all the other works of man. But facts are still facts; and patriotism and fancy must yield to the story that they tell.]

Under the direction of Government, five routes were surveyed, one of which—that from the mouth of Kansas river—was abandoned as utterly impracticable. The estimated cost of building the road upon either of the four others is set down thus:

Routes near the 47th and 49th parallels of latitude—$150,871,000.

Route near 41st and 42d parallels of latitude, $116,095,000.

Route near the 35th parallel, $169,210,265.

Route near the 32nd parallel, $93,120,000.

The distance by the shortest route, that of the 32d parallel from Fulton on Red River to San Francisco, is 1,618 miles.

The largeness of the sums here named is not alarming. What might be expended on a war of conquest with Mexico, or what might be sunk in a year's struggle with Great Britain, may surely be devoted, within ten years, to the accomplishment of so great a national work. But beyond the mere question of the cost of construction, there are obstacles interposed by Nature, that the ingenuity of our race cannot overcome, except upon conditions that we hope never to see the necessity for imposing. On each of these routes, a desert waste of 400 to 600 miles is to be crossed before the Pacific can be reached. No matter where the crossing is attempted, it is a barrier without wood, without water, without the capability of sustaining population, and without an inviting feature or evidence of wealth that can be profitably used by man. Here and there are fertile patches—limited localities that yield a wiry and stinted grass or a meagre supply of fuel. Here and there are streams that give but an illusory promise of living water—that rise and fall, disappear and reappear in a way that defies calculation and confounds science. But go where one may in the American Sahara, the forbidding features of the natural scenery—the bald and towering mountains, the fathomless gorges, the sterile and unproductive soil, coupled with the silence that is unbroken by sound of animal life—forbid all hope that it can be made the abode of humanity and the seat of civilization. That American enterprise, fertile as it is in expedients and lavish as it is with money when a great object is to be attained, will ever attempt to cross that waste with the iron horse, except upon compulsion of an enemy, we do not believe. With all of Jonathan's boldness, there is a strong dash of prudence and a laudable care for profits. He casts his bread upon the waters never without an expectation that it will return after many days. A century will fail to convince him that a road running through eighteen hundred miles of country, a fourth of which is desert, over which a bird never willingly flies, and the remainder of which, three hundred miles West of the Missouri frontier, has nothing to invite migration and settlement, will ever pay. His arithmetic has shown him what, when he was full of the excitement and enthusiasm that the discussion of the great project evoked, he did not choose to learn, but what experience, in some cases costly and painful, [illegible] affording local business and travel, cheap and abundant fuel, and easy access to never failing water, even on the Atlantic slope, are indispensible to the profitable operation of lines that may be kept open without the aid of a standing army. There are still volumes of poetry in the scheme of connecting the Atlantic and Pacific by an iron link—of turning the tide of Asiatic commerce across our prairies—of opening a highway across our own territory that shall be traveled by all nations—but the scheme is poetry and nothing more.

The Provocation for the Assault upon Horace Greeley.

We have recorded in another place an account of the brutal assault made on the person of Horace Greeley by a congressional ruffian, representing Arkansas in Congress. Below we give the pretended provocation for the dastardly and cowardly act:

Editorial Correspondence of the New York Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.

I have had some acquaintance with human degradation; yet it did seem to me to-day that Rust's resolution in the House was a more discreditable proposition than I had ever known gravely submitted to a legislative body. Just consider the facts: Mr. Banks has for more than six weeks received the vote of a very large plurality of the House—never polling more than ten short of a majority, usually only six or seven, and sometimes coming with two or three. He had repeatedly tendered his declination to his friends, and they have uniformly refused it and placed him again in nomination. Last evening they held another caucus, resolved to support him to the end, and resolved to hold no more caucuses, lest their adversaries might be encouraged to hope that they would change their candidate.

Yet in the face of this demonstration, the two hostile minorities come into the House this morning and seriously attempt to invite Mr. Banks to decline—for that is just what Rust's resolution amounts to. It could not affect Mr. Banks' rights, nor those of his supporters; but it would seem to be an indignity, and might be expected to wound his sensibilities. But Mr. Banks will never take counsel with his bitter enemies as to the propriety of his withdrawal from the canvass. There were men who voted for this resolve—or rather, voted not to lay it on the table—of whom I did expect better things; and for a time it would seem that the combination of Democrats and South Americans, with all the stragglers would carry it; but it was laid on the table by a vote of 100 to 99—Mr. McMullen (Dem.) of Va. voting to table it at the last moment. I think this very resolve was saved yesterday from being put on the table by a tie vote—96 to 96. But for Mr. McMullen the result to-day would have been the same. H. G.

The Cincinnati Fugitive Slave Tragedy.

In another column will be found a full report of the particulars of the recent horrible Fugitive Slave tragedy in Cincinnati. It adds another leaf to the bloody slave code; another shade to the dismal features of the barbarous Fugitive Slave law; and another refutation of the slaveholders' oft repeated assertion that, his human chattels are happy and contented in not desiring freedom. The Cincinnati Gazette, whose account of the tragedy we transcribe to our columns, remarks, editorially:

"The feature of this affair is an incident for which a parallel can hardly be found in all the tragedies recorded in history. Though the testimony is not absolute, it is the unanimous conviction of those who most intimately know the circumstances, that the mother of the four children who were captured made a desperate effort to take their lives, rather than that they should be returned to servitude, and that she actually did kill her little girl by cutting its throat, and inflict wounds upon the others. The awful despair which must have overcome the mother, who is a rather amiable and intelligent looking female, before she was capable of committing such a deed, may be dimly imagined, but those of us who have "free souls" cannot realize it. As the news of the tragedy spread over the city, it caused an universal shudder of horror; and not here alone, but throughout the civilized world the sickening sensation will be felt. And this is not an item merely for the newspaper of to-day, but one of those facts of dark and startling significance which are for all time."

TRADE OF CHICAGO.—We are again reminded of the increasing importance of the trade of this city, by the preparations which are going on for large direct importations of merchandise direct from Europe. This morning the senior partner in the hardware house of Bate & Shiffer leaves for Germany, where he goes to lay in their stock, which will be sent here direct. We mention the fact as an evidence of the enterprise of our merchants and the prosperous business that they are doing.

LATE WASHINGTON NEWS.

TEST VOTE ON THE SLAVERY QUESTION.

House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.

RECORD-MAKING IN THE HOUSE.

To-day the House has been engaged in voting on "platform" resolutions, and "making records," a business profitable perhaps as voting for Speaker in the present condition of affairs.

Mr. Dunn, Republican, of Ind., offered the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That regarding the political complexion of the present House of Representatives as indicating the undoubted sentiment of a large majority of the people of the United States against the act of the last Congress, repealing the restriction against Slavery in the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska imposed by the Compromise of 1820, no man ought to be chosen Speaker of this body who does not fully and heartily harmonize with that sentiment, or who will hesitate to exert himself earnestly for the restoration of that restriction in terms or in substance.

Lost by one vote: Yeas, 102; Nays, 103.

Solomon G. Haven, Thomas R. Whitney, Wm. W. Vale, John Wheeler, Millward, Fuller and Broome, of Pennsylvania, voted against it, and it was lost by one majority. These facts prove that the men named have gone over, body and soul, on the Nebraska question, to their Alabama masters; and also that there is no solid Anti-Nebraska majority to the House.

The above doughfaces are all leading Know Nothings and Slave Holders. Wells, of Wisconsin, voted with the Know Nothings and Slave Holders; Peck, of Michigan, dodged. Both of these men were elected by Anti-Nebraska constituencies.

2. Resolved, That said restriction ought to be restored as an act of justice to all the people of the United States, as a proper vindication of the wisdom, patriotism and plighted honor of the great statesmen who imposed it, and as a necessary and certain means, of reviving that concord and harmony among the States of the American Union, which are essential to the welfare of our people, and the perpetuity of our institutions.

Carried by one majority, viz: Yeas, 103; Nays, 102.

3d Resolved, That a useless and factious agitation of the Slavery question, in or out of Congress, is unwise, unjust to a portion of the American people, and, to some extent, injurious to every section of our country, and therefore should not be countenanced; but until the Missouri restriction of 1820 shall have been restored, in fact or in substance, in the said Territories of Kansas and Nebraska, fully and completely, to that extent and for that purpose, it is our solemn duty to the past, the present and the future, steadily and firmly to persist in our efforts.

Lost by three majority, viz: yeas 100, nays 103.

Fuller, of Pennsylvania, then moved a resolution, declaring against the agitation of the question of Slavery, which passed by one majority.

Mr. Meacham promptly followed this demonstration, by the following clear and unmistakable resolution:

4th, Resolved, That in the opinion of this House, the repeal of the Missouri Compromise of 1820, prohibiting Slavery north of 36 deg. 30 min., was an example of useless and factious agitation of the Slavery question, both in and out of Congress, which was unwise and unjust to a portion of the American people.

Mr. Stephens wanted to move as a substitute an address to the country congratulatory of the success of the Kansas and Nebraska bill, as evinced by the votes of the House to-day, but was cut off by the previous question. Mr. Meacham's resolution was then carried by a vote of 108 to 93, after which Mr. Stephens didn't want to renew his proposition. Thirty-two members were absent.

A Demonstration.

A supper was given to Senator BUTLER of South Carolina, at Richmond, Virginia, and the great men of the Old Dominion "honored it" with their presence and by their speech. The object of it was, to make more perfect the union of the Southern States. And really, one would suppose from reading the speeches, that there was danger of a conflict somewhere, and between somebody: for the "distinguished men" spoke gloomily, and as if that conflict could not be avoided.

The reader may not imagine that they referred to a war with Great Britain; not so: Gov. WISE and the rest scouted at it. "There is no danger of a foreign war; the Sound Dues was a humbug; the Nicaragua matter could not cause difficulties" said he. But the aggressions of the North could and would. Neither he nor any of the speakers mentioned what they were, and yet this should be done. Still, as this demonstration was intended to operate upon the Virginia Legislature and Congress, and as disunion is the alternative, on a certain contingency, it may be well to hear and to consider what these Southrons say.

Senator BUTLER, as reported by the Richmond Enquirer, said:

"He referred to the organization of the federal government, and urged, with much force, [illegible] for the prolongation of the slave trade for twenty years, the commercial policy of the country had been imparted to the majority, and its exercise had been extremely prejudicial to the South. He said South Carolina and Georgia were involved in the responsibility. He adverted to the present system of taxation, and said that no free government could exist long under such a system. He then spoke of the threatening aspect of our public affairs, and the trials that awaited us—trials that would test the strength of the Federal Union. He said he might not live to encounter them, but there were those present who would. His views of the constitutional powers of the Federal and State governments, were strictly in accordance with the State Rights Schools."

Gov. WISE followed, and proud to see Virginia and South Carolina united, proud of the lofty, uncompromising honor of the sons of the South, he proceeded thus:

In allusion to the sentiment which spoke of him as the Marshal of the advanced guard of Virginia, he said, measuring his words, with peculiar emphasis, "If I am the Marshal, where is the advanced guard?" It did not exist upon the statute book—there was no organized militia of Virginia." He then spoke of the material of which the Virginia militia was made, and where it was to be found; it was East of the mountains, in the Great Valley, and in the Trans-Alleghany country, where he had seen it in all its pride and strength during the late Gubernatorial campaign. He said he had the power under the Constitution to "imbody" the militia, and if an emergency required it, he would exercise that power. The Governor then adverted to the foreign relations of the country, and said there was no danger of a foreign war. The "Sound Dues," he said, was a humbug, and the Nicaragua question would not result in war, if our government acted firmly. He apprehended no danger of Louis Napoleon's stimulating Great Britain to war with the United States, and he would give her no material aid if war did ensue. He then, in a most serious manner, stated that there was danger of war—not foreign—but at home. He, then, adverted to the aspect of our public affairs, and the relations between the Northern and Southern States—the repeated aggressions of the North upon the South, under the most aggravating circumstances—the feeling of hostility growing up between the two sections, and that unless these aggressions ceased, and a better feeling of fraternity was restored, the result must be disunion and civil war. He showed, most conclusively, that the North was responsible for this state of things. He dwelt with great feeling and effect, upon the advantages of the Union—its future power, grandeur and glory, if administered upon the principles of the Constitution. He spoke of the high place which the name of Butler occupied on our historic page, invoked the Legislature, many of the members of which were present, to place the State in a condition of defence, and concluded with the expression of his great and anxious solicitude for the wealth, power and prosperity of the Commonwealth.

So with the other speakers. Lieut. Gov. McComas was ready for that last decisive step—the rupture of the Union. Ex-Gov. Leake was equally resolved; Hon. JAMES GARLAND more so. This was agreed upon—first, that the National Democracy was the hope of the South—second, that the reinstatement of the Missouri Compromise, the repeal of the Nebraska-Kansas bill, the prohibition of slavery in the territories, the rejection of a State because it had no prohibitory clause in its constitution, the abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia, or the prohibition of the Slave trade between the States, would cause a dissolution of the Union.

Here, then, is the alternative. We are given to understand that every Slave State has offered it, and that there will be no faltering on that side. Nay, we are told, that the militia of the South will be organized to sustain this decision, and that hence there is no danger of war at war at home. The country, doubtless, will be glad to get this information.

KIDNAPPING A SHAKERESS.—The Springfield Republican says that on Tuesday, three Shakers, a man, a woman, and a girl of some 18 years, came to that city for the purpose of trading. While they were in Plympton's store, near the depot, another woman and a young man, world's people, came in and spoke to the young girl. They appeared to be remonstrating with her, and urging her to accompany them, but she declining, they forcibly seized her, and after a pulling and hauling struggle with the Shaker man and woman, who resisted the taking off, they succeeded in carrying her off and putting her in the cars for the East, just then starting off. The parties stood in the relation of mother and daughter, and brother and sister; and it appears that the young woman had been beguiled, by her own weakness, or the arts of others, to join the deciples of "Mother Ann;" and that her relatives took this method of rescuing her. The Shakers, of course, are highly indignant, and will endeavor to get the girl back.

DETROIT RIVER OPEN.—The ferry boats are still running from Detroit to the Canada side and back, with heavy freights and large numbers of railroad passengers.

Great Stampede of Slaves.

Arrest of a Portion of the Fugitives—Dreadful Tragedy.

A SLAVE CHILD KILLED BY ITS MOTHER, AND THREE OTHERS WOUNDED—CONFLICT BETWEEN THE FUGITIVES AND THE OFFICERS—A DEPUTY UNITED STATES MARSHAL SHOT—CORONER'S INQUEST.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial of the 29th inst.]

About ten o'clock on Sunday, a party of eight slaves, two men, two women, and four children, belonging to Archibald K. Gaines and John Marshall of Richwood Station, Boone county, Kentucky, about sixteen miles from Covington, escaped from their owners. Three of the party are father, mother and son, whose names are Simon, Mary and Robert, the others are Margaret, wife of Robert, and her four children. The three first are the property of Marshall, and the others of Gaines.

They took a sleigh and two horses belonging to Mr. Marshall, and drove to the river bank, opposite the foot of Western Row, where they left them standing in the road, and crossed over to this city on the ice. They were missed a few hours after their flight, and Mr. Gaines, springing on a horse, followed in pursuit. On reaching the river shore, he learned that a resident had found the horses standing in the road as above stated, nearly dead from the hard drive that they had experienced and half frozen with the cold.

He then crossed over to this city, and after a few hours diligent inquiry, he learned that slaves were in a house about a quarter of a mile below the Mill Creek Bridge, on the River Road, occupied by a negro named Kite, a son of Joe Kite of infamous notoriety. He proceeded to the office of U. S. Commissioner Jno. L. Pendery, and, procuring the necessary warrants, with U. S. Deputy Marshal Ellis, and a large body of assistants, went at once to the place where his fugitives were concealed. It is as well here to state that Kite had been formerly owned in the neighborhood of Richwood Station, and was purchased from bondage by his father. On reaching the house, Major Murphy, a neighbor of Gaines and who was acquainted with Kite, called on him to open the door and said that resistance would be useless. This Kite agreed he would do, but delayed so long that the officers attempted to force it open, when a window was suddenly thrown up, and one of the negro men, Robert, presented a pistol and fired. The ball wounded Mr. Patterson, a resident of the Fourth Ward, who had been deputised to assist in the arrest. He was standing in front of the window, and observing the intention of the negro, threw up his hand at the precise moment the pistol was fired. The bullet cut off one of his fingers, and then struck him in the mouth, inflicting a severe flesh wound: A second party of officers came up, and the doors were forced open, and after a short but desperate resistance the slaves were secured, but not until Robert had fired three times, but without effect.

After the conflict was over, a bloody and melancholy spectacle presented itself. One of the slave children was discovered lying on the floor with its head nearly severed from its body; two others, boys, aged about four and five years, were bleeding from wounds in the neck and head, and an infant in the arms of Margaret had its head much swollen and was bleeding quite freely at the nose. The officers state that Simon and Mary, the eldest of the party, made no resistance, but that Robert and Margaret fought with the ferocity of tigers, and that during the affray she struck her infant on the head with a fire shovel, in the opinion of many with the intention of taking its life.

During a conversation with Margaret, she stated to us that she was eating breakfast in company with the other fugitives, when she heard some one cry out, "They are coming, they are coming." They sprang up in alarm, but before they had time to fly, their captors burst in upon them. She fought with all the strength with which she was capable, and cannot tell how her child was killed and the others wounded, but only knows that the death and the wounding occurred during the affray. This is her story, but it is evident that the bloody tragedy was perpetrated while the officers were seeking admittance, and she is said to have acknowledged the fact of killing her child and wounding the others during the excitement incident to the arrest. The Coroner's Inquest, which we give below, will throw some further light upon the subject.

The captives, as soon as arrested, were placed in express wagons, and driven rapidly to the office of the United States Marshal, on Fourth street, between Main and Walnut, followed by a large crowd of excited people. On reaching the Marshal's office, the wounds of the children were examined, when it was found that one of the children had received a flesh wound on the neck, about three inches in length, but barely penetrating the skin—the other a scalp wound, about the same length. They are but little hurt, and yesterday afternoon were playing about the Marshal's office, apparently unconcerned. On questioning the little fellows, they said that some one in the house threw them down and tried to kill them, but they either did not know, or would not reveal who it was. The slaves, on reaching the Marshal's office, seated themselves around the stove with dejected countenances, and preserved a moody countenance, answering all questions propounded to them in monosyllables, or refusing to answer them at all. Simon is apparently about fifty-five years of age, and Mary about fifty. The son of Mr. Marshal is here, in order, if possible, to recover the property of his father.

Robert is a young man about twenty-two years old, of a very lithe and active form, and rather a mild and pleasant countenance; he is spoken of by his owner as being an excellent servant. Margaret is a dark mulatto, apparently about the same age with her husband; her countenance is far from being vicious, and her senses, yesterday, appeared partially stultified by the exciting trials she had endured. After remaining about two hours at the Marshal's office, Commissioner Pendry announced that the slaves would be removed to the custody of the United States Marshal until 9 o'clock this morning, when they would come up for examination.

The slaves were then taken down stairs to the street door, when a wild and exciting scene presented itself—the sidewalks and the middle of the streets were thronged with people, and a couple of coaches were at the door in order to convey the captives to the Station-house. The slaves were guarded by a strong posse of officers, and as they made their appearance on the street, it was evident that there was a strong sympathy in their favor.

When they were led to the carriage doors, there were loud cries of "drive on," "don't take them." The coachmen, either from alarm, or from a sympathetic feeling, put the whip to their horses and drove rapidly off, leaving the officers with their fugitives on the sidewalk. They started on foot with their charge, to the Hammond street Station-house, which they reached in safety, and secured their prisoners for the night, although followed by a very large crowd of whites and blacks.

The slaves claim that they have all been on the other side of the river, and frequently by the consent of their masters.

About 3 o'clock, application was made to Judge Burgoyne for a writ of Habeas Corpus, to bring the slaves before him. This was put in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Buckingham to serve, who, accompanied by several assistants, proceeded to Hammond Street Station-house, where the slaves were lodged. Some time was spent in waiting for the arrival of Mr. Bennett, Deputy U. S. Marshal. When he arrived he was unwilling to give them up, and a long time was spent parleying between the Marshal and the Sheriff's officers.

The Sheriff being determined that the writ should be executed, Mr. Bennett went out to take counsel with his friends. Finally, through the advice of Mayor Faran, Mr. Bennett agreed to lodge the slaves in the jail, ready to be taken out at the order of Judge Burgoyne. Judge Burgoyne, having to be absent from the city to-day, will not hear the case until Wednesday morning.

At the Station House, Lieutenant Hazen showed his disposition to favor the slaveholder, by driving out of the room the gentleman who had sworn out the affidavits before Judge Burgoyne, and who had accompanied the Sheriff to point out the persons named in the writ, altho' he let Mr. Gaines, the slave claimant, come in at pleasure. Mr. Getchell, counsel for the slaves, remonstrated with him in regard to his course, and upon threats being made to report the case to Mayor Faran, he knocked under and allowed the gentleman to remain.

A Coroner's jury was empanneled, and several witnesses sworn, whose testimony corroborated what is above narrated, after which the jury adjourned until Wednesday morning.

LATER—ANOTHER ESCAPE OF SLAVES.—Six slaves belonging to Mr. Levi Dougherty, who lives on Fourth street, between Madison and Russell, Covington, Kentucky, together with two belonging to Mr. Gage, residing in the same neighborhood, made their escape from bondage on Sunday night. They crossed the river about eleven o'clock, and ere this are far on their way towards Canada. Their aggregate value to their owners was about eight thousand dollars.

AMERICAN EXPRESS ROBBERY—RECOVERY OF $35,000.—Samuel C. White, Express Messenger, implicated in the great robbery of $50,000, was brought to this city on Saturday by officer Toles, on a requisition from the Governor. He was lodged in jail where Ayer and King, his confederates, are now confined to await trial. The company have, it is said, succeeded in recovering about $35,000 of the money stolen. The property which has been secured consists of a tavern stand and a livery establishment in the town of Lawrence, Mass., and between $7,000 and $8,000 in money, deposited in the bank at Haverhill, Mass., all of which are attached and injunctions hanging over them.—Buff. Advertiser 29th inst.

LOUIS NAPOLEON'S MILITARY AMBITION.—The Emperor Napoleon has again announced the idea of assuming actual command of the army and it is reported that he has stated to General Bosquet he should accompany him to Finland in the spring. Rumor goes further, and says the Government will be administered, during the Emperor's absence, by a commission composed of Marshals Wagram, Valliant, Canrobert, Prince Napoleon, and Count Walewski. The British Government is much opposed to these these intentions of Louis Bonaparte.

Maryland is moving for a Registration Law, in order to enforce a regard of births, marriages, and deaths in the State. New York has such a law, and the amended Constitution of Virginia provides one. Massachusetts takes the lead in the perfect working of the system. The law serves a double purpose, in determining the increase of population, and supplying means for establishing the rights of property.

JENNY LIND AND HER HUSBAND.—The London correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says, in speaking of Jenny Lind Goldschmidt's concert:

"The house was crowded. I am told, but only give it as a report, that the immense fortune which she had amassed before her marriage, has been squandered away in gambling by her husband; ergo, perhaps, her appearance again before the public as a singer."

Australian News.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.

The advices from Melbourne are to 2d November, and from Sydney to 27th October.

The Melbourne Argus says that rich veins of quartz have been discovered about 20 miles from Geelong. An assay by crushing and amalgamation gave at the rate of 880 ounces to the ton. There was a great rush of miners to the spot.

Several failures had taken place in Sydney, which created considerable want of confidence. Other failures were anticipated, but it is supposed the crisis had passed.

MELBOURNE COMMERCIAL.—The price of gold is £3 15s 3d per ounce. The arrivals of shipping had been numerous, including the G. O. Herrick with 6,450 bags flour from Valparaiso, the Wanta with 6,110 do. from do., and the Greyhound with 8,800 do. from do. The express from California had also arrived. Flour is quoted at £47 per ton, Chilian £37 do., Haxall and Galago £48 do.; wheat 15s per bushel.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.

The Tampa Peninsular of the 19th inst. contains the following paragraphs concerning the Indian wars in South Florida:

The news from Fort Myers is very indefinite. Scouting parties have returned without discovering Indians; having accomplished nothing but the destruction of several encampments and all the live stock and Indian property they met with. We understand that the block houses burnt by the Indians will be rebuilt, as well as several others at important posts.

The volunteer companies are organized on the Manatee river, under Captains Gates and Addison.

Fire at Lowell.

LOWELL, Jan. 30.

This morning a fire destroyed the Museum in this city with several stores in the lower part of buildings. Loss about $15,000; partially insured.

Late from Hayti.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.

Advices from Jamaica, to January 19, were received here yesterday. The Kingston Banner of the People says: by the arrival of the steamer Buzzard, yesterday, we learn that the expedition which was fitted out by the Emperor Soulouque for the invasion of the Spanish side of San Domingo, had met the Dominician force and a bloody battle took place between the opposing forces in the conflict. Gen. Duprasne of the Haytian army, and another General officer were surrounded by the Spaniards, and fell before superior numbers.

The fortunes of war, declared in favor of the Dominicians, and the forces of the Soulouque were driven back with great slaughter. The Emperor himself had disappeared altogether.—It is said he ran like a coward on the day of battle. It is supposed that he has been killed by the Spanish, or died from the fatigue of the march homewards.

Soulouque's mutilated army had not yet returned, but soon as the disappearance of the Emperor was made known at the capital a Provincial Emperor was proclaimed, who will, in all probability succeed to the reins of power.

Attack on Mr. Greeley.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.

The Herald's Washington correspondent telegraphs the following account of the attack by Mr. Rust on Horace Greely. Hon. Horace Greeley was twice assaulted this afternoon, by Mr. Rust, Representative from Arkansas. The first attack was made as Mr. G. was walking down in front of the Capitol, immediately after the House adjourned; he got about half way down from the Capitol steps to the avenue, when Mr. Rust stepped up to him and calling him aside and enquiring if he was Mr. Greeley, asked "are you a non-resistant."

Mr. Greeley replied, "that depends on circumstances." Mr. R. then struck him a blow on the right temple, and followed it up by others. The affair was sudden. Mr. G. had his hands in his great coat pockets and could make no resistance. He said, "who is this man, I don't know him." Mr. Rust answered "d——n you, you'll know me after this." He then walked on, and Mr. Greeley came along towards his lodging at the National Hotel, and when near the steps Mr. R. met him, and exclaimed, "do you know me now."

Mr. G. said, "It is Rust of Arkansas I believe," Mr. Rust then raised a cane and struck at Greeley's head. Mr. G. warded off the blow from his head and received it on his left arm, which was pretty badly bruised. Several gentlemen rushed in and the assault was stopped.

Supreme Court—Second Division.

JANUARY TERM, 1856.

The following points of law decided by the Supreme Court, at the January term, 1856, of the Second Division, we have obtained for publication, and may be relied upon as correct. The legal fraternity will find them invaluable, as the reports of decisions cannot, of course, be published until after the expiration of the next June term.

Reed et al. versus Kemp.—Reed gave Kemp a bond for a deed, which he neglected to record until Reed again sold and conveyed the same land.—Kemp filed his bond for record, without an acknowledgement, before the subsequent deed was filed. Held, That second purchaser thereby had constructive notice, and took, subject to Kemp's equity. Kemp altered the bond by inserting Reed's name in the body of it,—erased the one on the right hand of the mouth, and inserted the same date on the left side of it. Held, That these alterations were immaterial, and did not avoid the bond.

Hurd versus Denny.—Hurd sold Denny a tract of land, on which he received the purchase money in full, in different payments, at different times. He afterwards sold the land to another. Denny sued for the purchase money, which he recovered with interest. Held, That he was entitled to recover it back upon this rescision of the contract by Hurd, with interest from the respective days of the payments.

Inglehart versus Jernegan.—Jernegan brought this action as assignee of a promissory note endorsed to Vance and Smith, and by them to defendant.—The defence set up was, that the notice was given in renewal of a bill of exchange, drawn by Inglehart for the accommodation of Vance and Smith, which they afterwards paid, and took an assignment of this note, given in part on renewal of bill, and that this assignment to Jernegan, was after it was due, and for the mere purpose of collection.—To sustain this defence, a deposition was offered in evidence to prove the statements of Smith, while testifying as a witness. As admissions, the statements had been preserved in a bill of exceptions, in the case in which Smith had been sworn as a witness. A copy of this bill of exceptions had been certified by the clerk of the court in which the trial took place, and the deponent had referred to it to refresh his memory on giving his deposition. Thus refreshed, he recollected the substance of the testimony given; that it was correctly set out in bill; and directed that to be copied into the deposition as his answer to the interrogatory, which was done. This was objected to and excluded by the court, upon the ground that no record evidence was offered to show any such suit or trial, as is required in cases where proof is offered of a deceased witness' testimony. Held, That statements were admissible as admissions, and no proof of suit or trial, was required; that statement being made in sworn testimony made no difference. Held, also, That an account exhibiting the transaction out of which the bill of exchange arose, used by the party on that occasion, was admissible here, all upon the ground that they tended to show the true character of the parties, and the transaction as one of accommodation. Held, also, That letters written by attorneys of Vance and Smith, in a case in which they had sued in Ohio, to recover the same moneys of other parties, seeking to use plaintiff as a witness for them, are inadmissible—plaintiff was a competent witness in Ohio.

In the case of Tiernan versus Hinman.—Held, That money payable by installments, without interest, and all to become due upon default of payment of one, is in the nature of a penalty, and in default, the mortgagor may pay or tender the installments due before foreclosure, and thereby prevent a foreclosure before the last installment becomes due.

In the case of Cook versus Forrest—Held, That plea filed to vacation term in Chicago, after expiration of rule to plead, but before motion or default, is not in time.

In the case of Nolan versus Jackson—Held, That payment to attorney at law of record in the case, is not a payment to a resident client without proof of other authority than his retainer to obtain a decree for sale of land.

In the case of Parks versus Brown et al.—Held, That a party may, upon trial, strike out an endorsement on a note.

In the case of Higgins versus Lee—Held, That an averment of performance is not sustained by proof of excuse for performance. The contract was excluded under the special counts, and read under the general counts, and, under them, the rule of damages is confined to the contract price. The other party may recover such damages as he has sustained from a non-performance, under the general issue. The true amount of recovery, is the difference between the value of the work and materials under the contract price, and the damages sustained by non-performance of part, and the inferiority of the work done, and materials.

In the case of Haes versus Van Alstyne—The declaration was filed ten days after the commencement of the term, defendant entered his appearance. Rule was taken to plead and a default entered. Held to be erroneous.

Walker versus Goodrich.—It was held in this case, that the survivor of a partnership of attorneys, might recover for the services rendered before and after the death of one of the attorneys, and against all, or one of the members of the firm to which the services were rendered.

In the case of the Peoria and Oquawka Railroad versus Neill—Held, That a demurrer to a replication reaches back to the whole record, although a former demurrer to parts of it. Plaintiff's plea of set-off, to a party not on the record, unless he was payee and endorser, is not good.

In the case of Miller versus Miller—Held, That it is not error for counsel to refer, in argument, to an account filed by defendant, without offering proof to sustain it. The verdict is conclusive as to fact, whether plaintiff's services were rendered in the character of servant or daughter.

In the case of Morton versus Finney—Note declared on, was payable "on" a certain day. The note offered in evidence, was payable "on or before" the day. Held, That it was no variance and admissible.

SAD ACCIDENT.—A young man by the name of Scott, a physician lately from the State of New York, while in pursuit of game near Sugar Grove last Thursday, was accidentally shot. He, in company with two or three others, were riding in a sleigh by a field in which they observed a flock of prairie chickens. One member of the company shot the load from one of the barrels of a double-barreled shot-gun into the midst of the flock, and then ran to get the bird or birds he supposed he had killed, leaving the gun upon the sleigh, with the second barrel loaded and cocked. The gun slipped partially from the sleigh as the company rode along, and the lock of the gun catching upon some prominence in the path, the gun was discharged, and the whole load entered the body of Mr. Scott, causing his death in a few hours.—Dixon Telegraph.

WORCESTER'S NEW DICTIONARY. ROYAL OCTAVO, 565 PAGES. SOLD AT THE LOW PRICE OF $1.75.

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST DICTIONARY of the English Language, for constant and daily use, and no family should be without it. It is not only a Pronouncing and Synonimous Dictionary; but it contains an Appendix, with

2. Pronunciation of Scripture Proper Names.
3. Common Christian Names, with their signification.
4. Pronunciation of Modern Geographical Names.
5. Abbreviations used in Writing and Printing.
6. Phrases and Quotations in Latin, French, Italian and Spanish.
7. The Principal Deities and Heroes in Greek and Roman Fabulous History.

The great and crowning feature of the work, however, is its synonymes, arranged in connection with the definitions. Very few of our best writers are so thoroughly masters of their native language as never to experience embarrassment in searching after a fit expression, and it is to help in over coming this difficulty, that Dr. Worcester has introduced a short exhibition of synonimous terms. Take for example the following words:

A-BAN-DON, v. a. To give up; to quit; to forsake; to desert, to leave; to relinquish; to resign; to renounce; to abdicate; to surrender; to forego.

SYN.—Bad parents ABANDON their children; men ABANDON the unfortunate objects of their guilty passions; men are ABANDONED by their friends; they ABANDON themselves to unlawful pleasures.—A mariner ABANDONS his vessel and cargo in a storm; we ABANDON our houses and property to an invading army; we DESERT a post or station; LEAVE the country; FORSAKE companions; RELINQUISH claims; QUIT business; RESIGN an office; RENOUNCE a profession, or the world; ABDICATE a throne; SURRENDER a town; SURRENDER what we have in trust; we ABANDON a measure or an enterprise; FOREGO a claim or a pleasure.

This instance will suffice to show the very great benefit one may receive by having this Dictionary at hand, when engaged in letter writing; for, with it every man will be able to educate himself in the just and proper expression of his thoughts.

Worcester's Dictionaries are highly commended by most of the prominent literary men in the country. They are made the STANDARD AUTHORITY IN ORTHOGRAPHY AND PRONUNCIATION, in the Public Schools of Boston, Cambridge, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., Buffalo, Schenectady, Rochester and many other principal cities throughout the United States; and, in addition to this testimony, they have recently been adopted as such by the Inspectors of the Public Schools of the City of Chicago.

Read the following testimony:—

Boston, Mass., November 13, 1855.
I willingly comply with your request that I would express my opinion of the Pronouncing, Explanatory and Synonymous Dictionary, by Mr. Worcester, of which you were good enough to send me a copy a few weeks since. As far as I have had occasion to examine it, I find this new Dictionary to be marked with the characteristics of Mr. Worcester's former works of the same class, viz., accuracy as to matters of undisputed fact, and sound judgment as to debatable points. His orthography and pronunciation represent, as far as I am aware, the most approved usage of our language. His definitions seldom leave any thing to desire. The synonymes form a valuable feature of the present work, and a novel one for a manual dictionary. The matter contained in the Appendix is of great value, and will materially promote the convenience of the reader.
I have made constant use of Mr. Worcester's Dictionaries since their first publication, and I consider the present work, in some respects, an improvement on its predecessors.
EDWARD EVERETT.

From William H. Prescott, LL. D.
Boston, Mass., November 8, 1855.
I am much obliged to you for the present of your excellent Dictionary. It is a welcome addition to my library; for, though I had provided myself with an earlier edition, I was not possessed of this, [illegible] I have long since learned to appreciate your valuable labor, which [illegible] to establish the accuracy of pronunciation, while affording the reader, by the citation of authorities, the means of determining for himself. Nor is the public less indebted to you for the pains you have bestowed on settling the orthography of words, which in many instances affords ample debatable ground to the lexicographer. These more prominent merits of your [illegible] of synonymes, with which the present edition is enriched.
A work [illegible] and philosophical principles, and yet so well accommodated to popular use, cannot fail to commend itself to all who have a correct knowledge of their vernacular.
WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT.

From the Rev. Edward Hitchcock, D.D.
Late President of Amherst College.
Amherst, Mass., October 3, 1855.
I acknowledge with gratitude the receipt of your new Pronouncing, Explanatory, and Synonymous Dictionary. Having been in the habit of using the "Universal and Critical Dictionary" almost exclusively for several years, I shall welcome the new one with its improvements and additions. So far as I have examined it, it seems to me admirably adapted to the sphere it was intended to occupy. I trust the public will appreciate its value, and thus reward you in some measure for your indefatigable and long-continued labors in this department of learning.
EDWARD HITCHCOCK.

From Washington Irving, LL. D.
Sunny Side, N. Y., October 3, 1855.
Accept my thanks for the copy of your Pronouncing, Explanatory, and Synonymous Dictionary which you have had the kindness to send me. As far as I have had time to examine it, it seems to me great satisfaction, and to promise to be well calculated to fulfill the purpose for which it professes to be intended—to supply the wants of common schools, and to be a sufficient manual for schools of a higher order.
WASHINGTON IRVING.

From the Hon. Josiah Quincy, LL. D.,
Late President of Harvard University.
Quincy, Mass., October 9, 1855.
As I once, I think, told you, that agreeing with Lord Bolingbroke in little else, I shared his admiration and gratitude for the writers of dictionaries—he thought them worthy of special thanks to Heaven—works so full of labor, so extensive in their objects of research, yet so minute in the subjects of attention; so useful as to have become a necessity to literary life, yet requiring for success so much accuracy of thought, combined with judgment in investigation, that it seems that nature must be more than usually beneficent to confer on any one man all the qualities requisite to a happy result in the undertaking. The public have long since passed judgment on your qualifications, and the lapse of many years has confirmed its earliest decisions.

Michigan Central Railroad Co. 1856. North Shore Line of Steamboats. DETROIT AND BUFFALO.
NEW AND MAGNIFICENT STEAMER MISSISSIPPI, Has been added to this line, and it will commence running immediately upon the opening of Navigation, as follows:
WESTERN WORLD, J. H. BARKER, Commander. Will leave Buffalo—Mondays and Thursdays. Will leave Detroit—Wednesdays and Saturdays.
PLYMOUTH ROCK, P. S. RALPH, Commander. Will leave Buffalo—Tuesdays and Fridays. Will leave Detroit—Mondays and Thursdays.
MISSISSIPPI, S. G. LANGLEY, Commander. Will leave Buffalo—Wednesdays and Saturdays. Will leave Detroit—Tuesdays and Fridays.
The steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about 3000 tons each, commanded and officered throughout by men of large experience and capability, and fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the most desirable steamers that float upon the waters of the United States.
For the transportation of Freight, the Line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between Boston and New York, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward goods and merchandise with greater dispatch than has ever yet been attained.
Shippers of merchandise from the East should mark packages to the care of C. L. Seymour, Buffalo; merchandise from the West, should be to the care of John Hosmer, Agent, Detroit. C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

2000 Tons Superior Bituminous Coal.
THE SUBSCRIBERS HAVE AT THEIR Yard, adjoining the track of the Galena, Burlington and Dixon Railroad, two thousand Tons of the best Erie Coal, which they are selling in lots to suit purchasers, at a greatly reduced price. The yard being in the immediate vicinity of the above named railroads, gives us facilities for delivering on board the cars not possessed by any other dealers in the city, making a difference in favor of the purchaser of about 50c per ton in the price. The quality of the coal is warranted to be equal to the best that can be found in this market. Country consumers are invited to call before ordering elsewhere. City orders can be handed to us, sent through the Post office, or left at the store of Mr. Sanford, a few doors north of the Post office—prompt delivery will be made in any part of the city.
